Wayne State University was created as a state institution by Act 183 of 1956, succeeding Wayne University formerly operated by the Detroit Board of Education. The university was given autonomous constitutional status by vote of the people of Michigan in the April 6, 1959, election.

Wayne State University is one of only 261 of the nation's more than 2,100 four-year universities and colleges that have been designated by the Carnegie Commission as research universities. Of these 261 institutions only 151, including Wayne State University, are classified as "Doctoral/Research Universities — Extensive." To be included, a university must annually award 50 or more doctoral degrees across at least 15 disciplines. For public institutions, 166 are considered "Doctoral/Research," while only 102 are "Doctoral/Research — Extensive."

As a state institution of higher education, Wayne State University is less than 50 years old, but several of its colleges are of long standing. The College of Education traces its history from 1881 and the School of Medicine from 1868. As a university, Wayne came into being in 1933, when the Detroit Board of Education united the several institutions of higher learning under its jurisdiction.

The university has 14 schools and colleges and enrolled more than 30,000 students in Fall 2000. The schools and colleges within the university include the School of Business Administration; College of Education; College of Engineering; School of Fine, Performing and Communication Arts; Graduate School; Law School; College of Liberal Arts; College of Lifelong Learning; School of Medicine; College of Nursing; College of Pharmacy and Allied Health Professions; College of Science; School of Social Work; and College of Urban, Labor and Metropolitan Affairs.

Once confined to a single building, Wayne State's campus areas have grown to 203 acres and 96 major buildings. The university's main campus is located at the junction of the Ford and the Lodge Expressways in the University Cultural Center area of the City of Detroit. Five extension centers are located throughout the tri-county area. The university offers four-year degree programs at University Center in Macomb County.

The university's Medical Campus is located less than a mile from the Main Campus in the Detroit Medical Center, which consists of 5 private and public hospitals. The Veterans Administration recently constructed a 432-bed hospital in the Medical Center, its largest project ever. Wayne State's School of Medicine is the largest single-campus medical school in the United States and the fourth largest when multi-campus schools are included. The Center's hospitals and clinics serve as an educational facility for Wayne State students in medicine, nursing, pharmacy and social work, as well as health-related programs in liberal arts.

The university's campus is the academic meeting ground for upwards of 40,000 different individuals of all ages and occupations each year, including recent high school graduates, community college transfers, graduate and professional students, businessmen, professionals in all walks of life, industrial workers and retirees, all of whom have the common goal of learning. Eighty-nine percent of WSU's students are Michigan residents, 2 percent from other states and 9 percent from foreign countries. To insure proper coordination and course scheduling, Wayne State works very closely with community colleges in Michigan and with all educational institutions in southeast Michigan.

Wayne State University is accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and university programs are accredited by the appropriate agencies.
